

World-class athletes, scientists, and product experts stand behind GNLD!

NOTRE DAME football team trains with GNLD!

Just a few short months ago, the NCAA Notre Dame football team began using GNLD's exclusive Sports 30™, Salmon Oil, and Carotenoid Complex™. Ninety-five percent of the players are taking GNLD supplements, and we're happy to report that they're already experiencing positive results! "The team isn't as sore as last year at this time," says Notre Dame Strength & Conditioning Coach, Mickey Marotti. "The players seem to have a more rapid recovery time. I'm pleased with the results."

DR. FURST LETTER published in Chemical & Engineering News

In the May 17, 1999 issue of Chemical & Engineering News, GNLD Senior Scientific Advisory Board member, Dr. Arthur Furst, raises two very important questions about the consequences of genetically altering seeds for mass food production.

Dr. Furst asks:

1. What is the profile of the active nutrients in these altered seeds?
2. How does this profile compare to the original, unaltered seeds?

"These questions are raised to call attention to a possible problem for human nutrition," explains Dr. Furst. "If, for example, the ratios of active carotenoids, flavonoids, or other nutrients are altered in the transgenic plants, will this alteration compromise the antioxidant protection that fruits and vegetables have? The latest hypothesis is that antioxidants are the greatest protectors against degenerative disease; changing one component, or the ratio of components, may offer less protection."

Dr. Furst stresses these concerns must be addressed if genetically altered crops are to replace what is currently available. "Until the debate is resolved, the public will undoubtedly depend on highly-advertised 'antioxidant' products," says Dr. Furst. "Despite the advertising of many companies, antioxidants from fruits and vegetables are the most effective. The long-term effects of ingesting synthetic antioxidants and those from exotic sources are not known."

Dr. Furst is truly a champion not only for GNLD, but for the entire world. His dedication and commitment to science is helping to assure that people around the globe have access to the best whole-food nutrients available!

DON LAWSON UNVEILS the benefits of GNLD's natural products!

GNLD product expert and International Vice President of Sales, Don Lawson, is hosting several inspiring product trainings to help you and your team share the life-changing benefits of GNLD's natural, whole-food supplements. Find out why GNLD products are unique to the entire industry and get the facts you need to launch your business into the 21st century! Bring your friends, family, and prospects to one of Don's highly informative and entertaining meetings, and introduce them to nature's own health-promoting miracles!

Attend a training near you!

July 6	Kansas City, KS
July 7	Milwaukee, WI
July 8	Toledo, OH
July 9	Manhattan, NY
July 10	Mississauga, ON